* See the upcoming Photo Edit chapter (in this book) for an image editing step-by-step process. * Adobe provides a number of free classes online on image editing. # Creating an Image File An image file, also known as an _image_, is an electronic file format stored on a computer that is used to represent digital images. The format used to store image files is dependent on the specific device and software application that you use to create your image. When creating an image file, keep the following points in mind: * Your image file format type and size must match the size of the final printed image. Otherwise, when you insert the file into a standard printer, you may have to enlarge the image or print at a smaller size to fit the print size of your project. * If you insert an image file into a printer, the original image's size and file format type are not used to size the final printed image. Instead, the printers use a standard size and measurement to determine the correct print size. To properly print your file, you need to size the image based on that standard measurement. ## File Format Types There are three main types of image file format types used by image editors, and each type has a specific size and method of storing data. It is important to know about the file type before you start to work with any image in a program. File type formats include * BMP (Windows only): A Windows-only format and file type. Though the digital camera may use this file type, most other image editing programs work only with Windows file formats. * EMF (Windows only): A Windows-only file type. * GIF (Windows, Mac OS X, and Linux): A Windows and Mac OS X format and file type. This format is very similar to JPEG, but uses much less storage space. * JPEG (Windows and Mac OS X only): A Windows and Mac OS X format and file type. JPEG is a popular compression file type that is used with the digital camera. * PNG (Windows and Mac OS X only): A Mac OS X format and file type. * TIFF (Windows, Mac OS X, and Linux): A Windows, Mac OS X, and Linux format and file type. TIFF is a popular image file format that's used with the digital camera.

Whether you're already using Photoshop or planning to start using it, here's how to get the most out of Photoshop Elements. Set up your workspace with default tools Photoshop Elements allows you to start working with a full set of standard tools and functions. However, you have to go through the process of “learning the ropes” to gain efficient access to the tools and buttons you’ll use most often. The good news is that you don’t have to learn everything. You can use the program quickly and efficiently with the default tools without spending time on learning every single tool, and you can still get the most out of the program. Once you’re set up for your workspace, here are the default tools that Photoshop Elements has in the Basic section: Tools to Learn Let’s start with Tools to Learn: - Touching the tools with your mouse will bring up contextual menus. The buttons have specific functions, and the icons at the right can give you more information about the tool or offer a menu. - The T with a small image inside is an interactive button. Clicking it brings up a mini floating palette with the properties of the selected layer. The right side of the palette shows the settings and format options for the selected layer. Basic toolset The basic tools we’ve mentioned and the tools used in the following list of tips are very good starting points. From them, you can learn more about the types of editing, adding new layers, and creating and moving objects. You’ll find many of these tools under the Edit section. Here are some of the most useful tools you can learn in Photoshop Elements. Edit tools The basic tools like clone, move, lasso, and rectangle are essential to any photo editing. You can find these tools under the Edit section in Photoshop Elements. Many of the tools are similar to those in Photoshop CS5/CS6. Many people are also familiar with the newer features of Photoshop CS6 Cracked Accounts, like Quick Selection tool and Content-Aware Patch, which we’ll talk about later. - Selection tools - Lasso and Magic Wand (red arrow) - Move and rotate objects - Clone tool - Quick selection tool - Gradient tool Direct selection The tools that select objects by color or inside an object are the best tools for 388ed7b0c7

McCain 'gutting' U.N. budget, taxes and warns of autocracy in 'breaking down' Poking fun at the GOP candidate, Miss Universe Jennifer Hawkins said: 'He's got a terrible button-down kind of shirt' US Republican presidential candidate John McCain has long been a critic of the United Nations Miss Universe Runner-up Jennifer Hawkins opened the charity auction with a sarcastic pre-show saying: 'He's got a terrible button-down kind of shirt on.' As Jennifer Hawkins, Miss Universe 2008, warmed up the crowd on Thursday night at the end of the live and final pageant show which saw the Kazakh singer At the Final Curtain receive the ultimate accolade of being crowned the new Miss Universe. At the moment of utter success, the 23-year-old runner-up was greeted with massive standing applause from all around the arena, making Jennifer Hawkins a little unsure what to do next. 'Yes you can!' someone shouted, and she walked up to the stage to take her place in front of a podium which was cluttered with trophies, flowers and Miss Universe souvenirs. Scroll down for video... 'I'm really happy. This is amazing. I didn't expect this to happen to me,' said Jennifer Hawkins as she walked up to take her place at the podium where she was met with applause 'I'm really happy. This is amazing. I didn't expect this to happen to me,' she said after receiving the top honour in the pageant which held at the American Airlines Center in Dallas. The final question from the judges and winner of the international TV rights to the Miss Universe pageant, Tyra Banks, to take the crown was 'How do you plan on representing the United Nations in your pageant?' A thin smile on Jennifer's face, she answered: 'I really don't know.' But all was far from over as she was 'put up on the pedestal' and the first of many ecstatic cheers rang out. More cheers followed as pageant authorities went to present Jennifer with her trophy, as she went to her right and picked it up. 'I'm really happy. This is amazing. I didn't expect this to happen to me,' she said as she walked away from the stage, hugging her mother and dozens of fellow Miss Universe contestants. 'Thank you to everybody,' she said. 'I appreciate it.' A noisy applause
